Overview

Fryeburg Academy's new 15,000 square foot Leura Hill Eastman Performing Arts Center was completed in the fall 2008.

The theater within the facility features 380 wide backed seats; in an acoustically designed space surrounded with wood paneling. The stage has platforms on either side for rigging and lights, a lighting catwalk at the roof and state of the art light and sound systems. The back of the house has dressing rooms, a green room and a scene shop to support the productions.

In addition to the theater, there is a spacious lobby for social events, an art gallery, a classroom and office space for the director of the performing arts center.

This 16 million dollar facility is part the Academy's ongoing building program which includes the new Field House & Fitness Center, also designed by Harriman Associates and built by Sheridan in 2007.
